to him and yourself, and I have no doubt he will acquit himself to the entire satisfaction of the Prince as well as to Major Hart under whose immediate care he will be placed. I find that he left Smyrna on the 11th March in the Dutch Brig the "King of the Netherlands" that after a passage of Six days he arrived here and remained until the 1st of May, being four days before my arrival, when he went by Vessel up the Black Sea to Redoutculu on his way to Georgia from thence his way is very clear to Tabreez. Such is the Outline of his History to that time of which he has no doubt given you full Particulars, which I hope reached you in due course. Mr. Willsonne will have communicated to you the particulars of my Journey to and from Tabreez, which saves me the Recapitulating — and since I wrote to him I have not quite fixed on my Plan for returning but tis most probable to be by the Black Sea. As yet we know nothing certain here of the movements of the Russians nor if they have crossed the Danube and this uncertainty renders it so difficult to decide on what Route to take. I am the more anxious to return to Tabreez to make arrangements for another Journey to England when I hope to have the pleasure of seeing you in London.

SYEED KHAN, late SADIK BEY

[CHARLES BURGESS TO HENRY BURGESS.] Tiflis, July 3, 1828

You will be surprized at the date of this letter as my last was from Constantinople since that I did not give you any certain intelligence that I should proceed through Russia — however here I am and upon the whole feel glad that I have taken this course although much that has occurred since my departure from Constantinople have changed my vision and expectations in what way I cannot here explain to you as this letter is almost sure to bee opened before it reaches your hands. On May 1st I set sail from Constantinople having with some difficulty succeeded in finding a ship going to Taganrog — after a prosperous voyage of 16 days including 6 quarantine I landed at the lazarretto in Taganrog where I had still 14 days to remain in confinement on shore. When I left Constantinople it was with the intention of landing at Kertch in the Crimea from thence embarking for Redout-kalè and thence proceeding to Tiflis which is only 5 days journey, on arriving at Kertch I found there was little chance of my getting an opportunity to proceed by sea to Redoutkalè and the governor told me I should run great risk of being made prisoner or killed by the Mahometan tribes who inhabit the country between the Black Sea and Tiflis and as the war was already commenced against the Turks they would be sure to plunder and carry off any Christian they might meet — he therefore advised my proceeding to Taganrog and from there going by land to Tiflis, this I did and after a journey of 20 days arrived here.
