me in the kindest way and appears perfectly satisfied with my conduct. The Prince Abbas Mirza received him very well has granted him all his requests and the mines the commerce to England and the silk trade will be in his hands entirely — he is also made a Khan. I expect you will see him in England again very shortly.

Should it be particularly inconvenient to you to pay my Tiflis bill do not think of it — by the time it is returned it will be perfectly in my power although the effect will be bad of having it returned. I should think some of my relations would do me the favour to pay and I will most positively promise to send the money to England by the first convenient opportunity . . . I would have sent the money by Mr. Mackenzie the gentleman who is kind enough to take charge of this but it is impossible I can receive it until I have been presented to the Prince who will not return from Teheran for twenty days. But do not by this suppose that I am not authorized to call myself a Lieutenant in his services this I am perfectly I have his own signature to the agreement in Persian.

I have now a commission to beg of you to perform on the part of Major Hart his little son Alexander who is with his brother is not yet placed at school the Major has not the highest confidence in his brothers (who is a great disciplinarian) judgment in this matter. Now he wishes you to inform me of the best schools you know of — the Major wishes him to be placed where he can have the best possible education and more liberty than boys generally have at schools, for example he would like him to have a horse or pony to be allowed to ride out and above all to be perfectly instructed in this art which in Persia is of the first importance. Religion is of no importance that is to say of the sect of the master. I proposed Dr. Morrell should he still keep school or if not where my brother Joe was at Liverpool. He appeared to like the idea of Dr. Morrell extremely and I hope you will inquire if he has retired altogether or not.

You may suppose the march from Tiflis to Tabreez in the middle of July was not the pleasantest ride in the world — my nose and cheeks were completely raw with the sun before I got here but as to health I never felt stronger or better in my life. The gentlemen here lead most temperate active lives that is to say Major Hart Dr. Cormick and Major Willock. You must send your letter for the present until Turkish affairs are arranged by way of St. Petersburgh you will not find any difficulty in getting some of the Petersburgh merchants to take charge of them there and they must be there enclosed and forwarded under cover to Mr. Le Chevalier de Gamba Consul de France à Tiflis who has kindly promised to take charge of any letters for me.

Should you see Capt. Hart do not mention anything about the school the Major is willing to pay for school expenses only from 100 to 140£ pr. ann.
