of this, on coming to a fine valley with a rushing trout stream in the middle and the banks on each side for, in some places nearly 50 yards, covered with grass and buttercups which reached up to my knees.

The trout stream 20 miles from this place, when I last saw it, was so deep and rapid that Captn Sheel, in trying to cross it, washed away horse and all, and if it had not been for his servants pulling him out would certainly have drowned. I shall probably add a line to this when the packet arrives from Teheran to start the tartar, to conclude I have a request to make, that is that you will ask my Father to give me an average of the prices of provisions and labour throughout England something in the same way as I do to you the prices etc. of this province —

The price for a workman such as a bricklayers labourer or the whole of that class called navigators in England viz road makers or out door workers of every description not having learnt any craft, is d6 pr day. I ought to tell you that from the beginning of July to the end of Decr fruit forms three fourths of the food of the poorer classes.

28th August

I have but a moment to spare to write you that two days ago a messenger arrived from Teheran with dispatches to be forwarded by tartar to Constantinople. By am't of begging and by other means I have managed to keep him until this instant; for the last two days I have been at work night and day to collect money and by my own endeavours and those of five other people (servants and friends) I have at last torn from our debtors the sum of 2450 Ducats 231 Gold Tomauns which I now send up to Constantinople and which ou't to realize at least £1130/10. I send you up a letter from my brother Charles from Teheran I am told (not by him) that he has sold his goods at enormous prices so high that Captn Sheel my informant says he ought to be ashamed of himself, so far so good, if true. And I believe you may calculate upon receiving at least as much if not more by the next tartar leaving.

[EDWARD BURGESS TO GEORGE BURGESS] Tabreez, August 4, 1836

It is rather curious that our Father and you should have thought it better for me to seperate from Charles, because this is a point I have been urging with him ever since the year 1833 and I can not get him to agree to it, one reason for his refusal is that Father Mother and you would be so shocked at hearing of our seperation! One of my reasons for wishing to seperate was that altho a partner I have no more control over the management of the business than if I were merely a servant and I do not think it fair that I should be made responsible by
