cures for one of the King's sons whom the other doctors had given up and other members of the Royal family, and some relations of the Prime minister. This had gained him such a high reputation that it was with difficulty that the King was induced to allow him to return to his post; but remaining here would not have suited Cormick at all, even altho attached to the Kings household, he is making money fast at Tabreez, what with pay, allowances, and the gains of his pharmacy his income can not be much less than fifteen hundred a year of English money.

You never told me whether you ever saw the Count de Sartige formerly Minister for France in Persia and now, or until very lately, holding the same post at Washington, and whether you delivered him the letter I sent you for him, I am sure he would have received you civilly; I see his name in the papers every now and then, and latterly if I mistake not about a quadruple treaty to preserve Cuba,[132] from the clutches of those dashing fellows of the U. S. who wish to incorporate the "lone Star" with their stars and stripes. Of a verity America appears to be the only place where chivalry still lives and flourishes, pity that with the heroic courage and dauntless energy of the knights of old, they have not their polish and courtesy.

Our society at Tehran has much changed of late oweing to the number of the Austrian, Italian and French officers who have come here and entered the service. Many of them are married and so we have a little lady's society, some of them are very accomplished playing and singing like first-rate artistes. Tehran is indeed changed from what it was when I first saw it, there was not then a single European in the place and now there must be near fifty.

I intend to try hard to get to England on a year's leave during this year, I hope to leave this about next May or June and be in England in August. The slow part of the journey will be here from here to Trebizonde as I travel with my wife whom I bring to England with me, we can not go post, but must go only a stage a day, so it will take us near two months to get to Trebizonde, from thence there are steamers and if the war does not prevent us we shall be in England in about twenty days.

[THADDEUS, ARCHBISHOP OF THE ARMENIANS IN PERSIA AND INDIA, TO EDWARD BURGESS] Julpha, Ispahan, November 8, 1854

I have the pleasure to inform you, that on the 23rd Ultimo I safely arrived here, and found my people in good state.

[132] There was no formal treaty, but rather an exchange of diplomatic correspondence among Great Britain, France, Spain, and the United States, which finally resulted in a declaration of opinion that Cuba was not to come under the control of any European power other than Spain. See Great Britain. State papers. v. 44 (1853–54), p. 114–236.
